

Raiders sign Navy's McCallum; Ryan rips Eagles' management

Associated Press

The signing of Napoleon McCallum, who has a five-year commitment to the Navy, to a professional football contract answers all but the biggest question the Los Angeles Raiders might have about the running back.

The Raiders still don't know when McCallum, who is committed to serving in the Navy until 1991, will be able to play.

"Napoleon McCallum is under contract with Los Angeles Raiders," Raiders' executive assistant Al LoCassale said. "The NFL has a rule that you must sign your draft choices within a year, and a draft pick must be signed if he's to participate in a training camp."

McCallum, who was drafted in the fourth round in last April's college draft, is scheduled to take a 30-day leave from the Navy in order to participate in the Raiders' preseason training camp, which begins Wednesday in El Segundo, Calif. The Raiders cannot make any plans beyond that for the 6-foot-1½, 220-pound running back.

During McCallum's leave, the Raiders will play their first exhibition game — in San Francisco against the 49ers on Aug. 10 — but LoCassale would not speculate whether McCallum would play.

According to a published report, McCallum was signed to a contract that pays him $100,000 immediately. The payment is part of a $700,000 bonus he will receive when his tour of duty is scheduled to end.

McCallum will be in the same situation as National Football League Hall of Famer Roger Staubach, who played with the Cowboys; Phil McKinney of the New York Giants, and Eddie Meyer, a running back signed as a free agent by the Atlanta Falcons while with the Marine Corps.

Napoleon McCallum

Pro football notes

In his last year at Navy, McCallum rushed for 1,327 yards on 287 carries and scored 15 touchdowns. He was also the first Midshipman to be allowed to red-shirt a season and play in his fifth year at the Academy. He suffered a broken leg early in the 1984 season, what was to have been his senior season, and did not play again that year.

Philadelphia Eagles' coach Buddy Ryan has criticized Eagles' management for slow contract negotiations and for what he called "stupid" treatment of first-round draft pick Keith Byars.

The Eagles have been "dragging their feet" on signing 21 draft picks and veteran free agents because team officials are following the lead of the rest of the NFL instead of thinking for themselves," Ryan said Friday.

"We're like the rest of the NFL, and I don't think it's right," Ryan said. "I'd like us to be the first NFL team to have all of its players signed and in camp. But the rest of the NFL is dragging its feet, and we are, too."

Ryan also took the Eagles' management to task for angering Byars last month by not agreeing to pay for a single hotel room for Byars during his off-season training program at Veterans Stadium.

For the last month, Byars has been training at home in Columbus, Ohio, and the Eagles have been unable to get him back.

Veteran running back Ron Springs, whose value to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers increased when the team failed to sign Bo Jackson, agreed to a two-year contract, worth a reported $350,000 a year, Friday.

Springs earned $250,000 last season when he gained 54 yards on 16 carries and caught three passes for 44 yards. He figures to play a more prominent role in Tampa Bay's offense this year because the Bucs were unable to sign Jackson, the Heisman Trophy winner from Auburn who was picked first overall in this year's NFL draft.

Former Pro Bowl running back William Andrews of the Atlanta Falcons, who has not played in two years because of a knee injury, has been cleared to participate in full-contact drills when the Falcons begin training camp next week in Suwanee, Ga.

Team physician Dr. John Garrett, gave his approval Thursday.

Andrews' left knee collapsed while he was carrying the ball in practice on Aug. 21, 1984. He suffered torn ligaments, damage to the cartilage, a stretched peroneal nerve and partial paralysis of the foot.

Oklahoma noseguard Tony Casillas, the 1985 Lombardi Award winner as the nation's top defensive lineman, says he probably will decide next week whether to sign with the Arizona Outlaws of the United States Football League or the NFL's Atlanta Falcons.

Outlaws co-owner Bill Tatham Jr. said Thursday Casillas must accept the Arizona contract offer by Tuesday or it will be withdrawn. Casillas was the No. 2 pick overall in the NFL draft.

Letters to the editor

I would like to address this letter in support of now ex-head coach Edwina Qualls.

In the past few years the newspaper has blown way out of proportion her record of wins and losses. I would rather have a coach like Edwina Qualls than have a coach who would knowingly bring disgrace on the UW by doing things he knew were in violation of NCAA rules. This is not the first time that the men's program has been in trouble with the NCAA.

I would like to know what Edwina Qualls did to warrant the press she has gotten from you? Sure she is a tough coach but she has, to some degree, brought to women's basketball at the UW a team that at times was very difficult to beat. We all have our off years and I think that you of the press were very hard on a good coach.

Maybe I don't know the whole story but I feel that the UW has lost a good coach and I wish her all the luck in her future. — Marilyn Wingler, Madison

Could not let last Sunday's tennis match between Boris Becker and Ivan Lendl go without a comment. I watched the tennis match at Wimbledon as a sports fan rather than a tennis fan. If ever there was a sample of sportsmanship shown by anyone, then this was it. A short edited version of this match should be shown to all kids in schools to show how one acts on and off the field. — Karl Petter, Janesville

My knowledge of the crew teams here in Madison always led me to believe that the team was made up of more than one boat — not just the top eight people.

I'm very proud of what our men's and women's varsity eight crews did at Nationals, but everyone has overlooked the fact that three other boats also won national titles.

It is very disappointing to not make your goal of attaining a seat in the first boat, but winning nationals partially made up for that. . . except no one even knew we were there because of all the emphasis put on the "Varsity 8's".

I'm not trying to put the blame on anyone for the lack of publicity because the crew teams have gotten more media coverage this year than I've ever seen. I'm just trying to let people know there was more than one boat at collegiate nationals representing Wisconsin and the rest of us are quite satisfied with our results too. — M. Yankowski, Madison

The Associated Press erroneously reported Sunday that baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said in a television appearance that he did not advocate drug testing for ballplayers. Ueberroth has long advocated testing for players.
